JOSEPH GOULDEN FALLS OVER DEAD

Adams County Native, Congressman from New York, Expires Suddenly in Broad Street Station. Had Successful Career.

Congressman J. A. Goulden, one of Adams County's most distinguished sons, dropped dead in the Broad Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Philadelphia Monday afternoon.

Mr. Goulden had been in Maryland on business, and was on the way to his home in New York City when stricken.

Hundreds of persons saw the Congressman drop on the steps, and several people ran to his assistance. A physician who was in the crowd examined the man and said life was extinct. To make sure, a reserve policeman called a patrol wagon and had the body taken to Hahnemann Hospital.

There it was said he had probably died of heart disease, and the body was taken to the Morgue, where it was identified by means of a card on his traveling bag.

Congressman Goulden was born on the old Goulden farm in Germany township, near Littlestown, on August 1, 1844, and entered the navy at the outbreak of the Civil War and later served in the army until peace was declared.

He became connected with educational work and from 1884 to 1888 he was State manager of the Pennsylvania Reformatory. After retiring from the position he removed to New York, where, in 1893, he was appointed school commissioner, serving for five years.

About that time he became connected with the insurance business, in which he remained until his death.

He represented the Twenty-third congressional district, as a Democrat in the Fifty-eighth, Fifty-ninth, Sixtieth, Sixty-first and Sixty-third Congress.

He was designated and confirmed at the primaries in 1914 and re-elected to the Sixty-fourth Congress.

He took a deep interest in Grand Army of the Republic affairs and was secretary of the commission that, in recent years, erected a soldiers and sailors' memorial monument in New York.

Congressman Goulden owned a fine farm near Taneytown and always spent his summers there. He never missed a tri-state county fair held yearly at Taneytown and while this lasted he remained on the grounds.

Mrs. Fannie Gowan, of West High street, is a cousin, and the only surviving relative living in this vicinity.

His parents, who died some years ago, were William and Mary A. (Wivell) Goulden.

TO EXPOSITION

Former Gettysburg Girl Won Teachers' Popularity Contest.

Miss Katherine Manges, for some time a resident of Gettysburg, and well known here, has won the popularity contest of the Bear Department Store, York, and will be given a free tour to the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The contest was open to all the school teachers of York and Miss Manges polled 80,000, or twice as many as her nearest opponent.

AT WORK AGAIN

Not Daunted by Misfortune, Mr. Johns Re-Opens.

S. L. Johns, proprietor of the Imperial cigar factory, which was destroyed by fire in McSherrytown last Thursday evening, opened a factory in his stable at Blue Gables Monday morning.

SECRETARY KNOX A VISITOR HERE

Former Head of the Department of State Makes Trip to Gettysburg Field. General Wood Mingles with Cadets.

Philander C. Knox, former Secretary of State, and United States Senator from Pennsylvania, was a visitor in Gettysburg Monday afternoon and, after spending several hours on the battlefield, continued with his party on a motor tour through this section of the state.

Mr. Knox did not stop here for either dinner or supper and but few persons knew of his presence in town.

General E. E. Wood and Mrs. Wood, and Miss Helen Hoopes, are registered at the Eagle Hotel. General Wood was retired from the service in 1910 but retains a keen interest in the boys at West Point where he was, for some years, one of the instructors.

He is now living in Washington. Captain George R. Goethals, son of General Goethals, of Panama Canal fame, is with the cadets from West Point. Captain Goethals is one of the instructors at the institution.

A number of other parties have been here to-day in connection with the visit of the West Point Seniors to Gettysburg.

Many of them have relatives in the class and take this opportunity of seeing them, as the boys are given little time away from the Military Academy during their four years' stay.

The cadets finished their tour of the battlefield to-day and their train is due to leave on its return at 7:30 this evening.

He was taken to the office of a physician where the splinter was removed. He was given antitoxin treatment to prevent lock-jaw and is getting along nicely.

WANT AUTOS FOR WAR VETERANS

Volunteers Asked to Take Grand Army Men and Others to and from Cemetery on Memorial Day. Tell Times of your Willingness.

WANTED: fifteen automobiles to convey veterans to and from the cemetery on Memorial Day.

At the request of the local Grand Army Post, the Times has accepted the commission to arrange for transportation of the veterans to and from the cemetery on Memorial Day.

It is estimated that accommodation for about fifty people will be required. Fifteen automobiles will insure the ride in comfort to the passengers as well as the driver. There has not been any difficulty in former years to secure sufficient motors for the trip and we believe this appeal will be met by the usual ready response from the automobile owners.

It should be a pleasure as well as a distinction to convey these men by whose efforts we have enjoyed an unparalleled era of prosperity and peace. The cars will have to be in line on Middle street in front of the Post Room with the drivers in readiness at 1:15 p. m. The procession is scheduled to move at 1:30, promptly, and the return will be made immediately after the exercises at the cemetery.

Names of these automobile owners who are willing to render this service can be left at the Times office. The list should be complete at an early date so do not delay in showing your willingness to perform this slight service.

BEAT BOARD BILL

Pushmobile Tourist Party Takes Sudden Departure.

After failing to pay Mrs. Weaver, 114 Chambersburg street, for boarding and lodging, the three pushmobile tourists who arrived in Gettysburg Monday afternoon departed this morning for Chambersburg. Advices have been sent to that place to put them under arrest. The party is composed of two men and a woman, who gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Wallace and Mr. Schmidt. They were using a Maxwell roadster, minus the engine, and pushed it when they could not get any other machine to tow them along.

Monday the Littlestown bus gave them a lift, and this morning the Caladonia bus gave similar service. They claimed they were traveling to San Francisco to win a wager of $1000 which would then be given for Belgian relief work.

Supper and lodging were secured at Mrs. Weaver's boarding house and the trio skipped out without ceremony before breakfast. Word was at once sent to Chambersburg to be on the look-out for them.

COVETED HONOR

WILL ASK FOR TOWN CLEAN-UP

Annual House Cleaning Day for Gettysburg to be Taken up at Meeting of the Town Council. New Officers to be Chosen.

Burgess Eicholtz stated Monday afternoon that he would take up with the town council, at their regular monthly meeting this evening, the matter of holding an annual clean-up day or week in the borough. Mr. Eicholtz had been in consultation with members of the highway committee and a date will be fixed which will allow the use of the borough hands and teams and not conflict with other work now under way.

The accumulation of old boxes, tins, cans, and other refuse in back yards and alleys should be removed at once, argue those who want to see a cleaner Gettysburg, while the streets need a thorough cleaning, too. It is planned to have the borough housecleaning conducted much after the manner of other years when the residents set out rubbish for removal and the borough teams did the rest.

It will not be the idea, however, to allow persons to impose on the highway force by asking them to remove the ashes which have been gathered during the winter. All refuse to be taken away should be placed in boxes or barrels so that it may be easily and quickly handled. The day or days will in all probability be fixed at this evening's meeting of council.

Mr. Eicholtz has received from Officer Shealer the resignation which he announced several weeks ago he would hand in at this time. A number of applicants have appeared for the position which will likely be filled to-night. Mr. Shealer has been on the force for several years and has been a highly efficient officer. He is retiring in order to devote his time to the garage business, in which he is associated with J. Herman Bream.

The demonstration here will be in the orchard of D. C. Jacobs on Tuesday, May 11. Unless otherwise announced the meeting will be held at one o'clock on the afternoon of the day mentioned, and the demonstrator will be there regardless of rain or sun. If the weather should be unfit for spraying, the public will have an opportunity to hear an address brought down to date on the subject of spraying to prevent wormy fruits, and will be able to see how the material is made and to ask questions and get such other help as the State's experts have to give.

HELB GETS CAFE

No Power to Set Aside Sale in Favor of J. A. Ring.

The liquor license of the A. C. Boll cafe, in York, was transferred on Monday to G. Curtis Helb, son of Julius Helb. The attempt of J. A. Ring, lessee of the Hotel Brooks, to acquire the Boll license and fixtures by offering $5,000 for them, as against Mr. Helb's bid of $4,800 at public sale, was unsuccessful. The court decided that it had no power, in the manner in which the case was brought before it, to set aside the public sale at which Mr. Helb bought, and accordingly it dismissed Mr. Ring's petition to have the sale confirmed to him.

4 MORE NEUTRAL SHIPS ARE SUNK

Germans Attack Norwegian and British Steamers.

TWO TRAWLERS ALSO LOST

Submarines Wage Unrelenting Warfare Against Merchantmen — All Crews Were Saved.

London, May 4.—Three Norwegian, one Swedish and two trawlers were added to the long list of neutral and belligerent vessels sent to the bottom by the German submarines on the second day of their resumption of activity in their warfare against shipping in British waters.

The Norwegian vessels sunk are the Lalla, the America and the Baldwin, while the Swedish steamer Ellida went to the bottom in three minutes after being struck by a German torpedo.

All of these vessels were sunk in the North sea, but all of the members of the crews of the ships sunk were saved.

The Norwegian steamer America was torpedoed in the North sea on Saturday. The vessel sank within two hours. The crew of the America, consisting of thirty-nine men, was picked up thirteen hours later by the Norwegian mail boat Sterling and was landed at New Castle. The America left Sunderland on Saturday morning after being struck by a German torpedo.

The Norwegian steamer Baldwin was sunk by a German submarine in the North sea on Sunday. The members of the crew, numbering seventeen men, were allowed to take to their boats. They landed at Leith.

Nine shots were fired into the Baldwin before she went down.

The Norwegian steamer Lalla was sunk in the North sea on Friday by a German submarine. Her crew was landed at Copenhagen by the steamer Anna, which witnessed the sinking, and at the request of the commander of the German submarine took the crew of the Lalla on board.

The Exchange Telegraph company has received a dispatch from its correspondent at Copenhagen saying that the Swedish steamer Ellida, timber laden, from Helsingborg for Hull, has been torpedoed in the North sea by a German submarine. She went to the bottom in less than three minutes.

The sixteen men and two women on board the vessel barely had time to make their escape in one of the small boats. After cruising about for two hours they were picked up by a Danish schooner and landed at Lemvig, Denmark.

Trawlers making port declare that a German submarine sunk two trawlers within fifty miles of Aberdeen on Sunday. The crews of the two vessels were successful in escaping in their small boats and reached Aberdeen.

It would appear as though the submarine ran amuck among the Aberdeen fishing fleet. In addition to sending two to the bottom it chased three other trawlers for twenty miles. A patrol boat was then seen approaching, whereupon the submarine submerged.

KAISER AT ANTWERP

Visits Submarine Yards in Company With Prince Henry.

London, May 4.—Telegraphing from Amsterdam, the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company says that Emperor William and Prince Henry of Prussia, his brother, were at Antwerp the end of last week and inspected the harbor fortifications and the submarine yards. Subsequent to this they returned to Luxembourg.

The Antwerp newspapers were forbidden to mention this visit until such time as the emperor was back in Luxembourg. The few persons who recognized his majesty say he looked well, but aged.

GERMAN AVIATOR AT DOVER

Hostile Aeroplane on English Side of Channel Driven Off by Gun Fire.

London, May 4.—A German aeroplane, coming from the direction of Ostend, scouted over Dover and Folkestone. It was driven off by gun fire. It is reported that a Zeppelin airship is traveling in the direction of England from the island of Vlieland, that is on the northern coast of the Netherlands.

Germans Oppose Boycott.

Amsterdam, May 4.—A movement to boycott American goods has been started in Germany, but it is being widely opposed. The Hamburger Nachrichten says: "We must be careful of America, for we shall need her assistance after the war."

Man in a Fit Drains in Trough.

Philadelphia, May 4.—While sitting on a watering trough at Eighteenth and Filbert streets, John Elly, fifty-five years old, fell in a fit face downward into the trough, which contained four inches of water. Passersby ran to the man's aid, but he drowned.

MURPHY ASKED BARNES FOR AID

Refused to "Pull Tammany Chestnuts From Fire."

Syracuse, N. Y., May 4.—That William Barnes told him that Charles F. Murphy, of Tammany Hall, had asked for help in 1911 to defeat a direct primaries bill in the legislature, and that Barnes, then chairman of the Republican state committee, had answered that he would refuse the aid asked and remarked that he would not pull the Tammany leader's "chestnuts from the fire," was the testimony given in the supreme court here by Walter T. Arndt, formerly Albany correspondent of a New York newspaper.

Mr. Arndt was one of several witnesses who were placed upon the stand by the defense. Among them was Edward T. Platt, son of the late Thomas C. Platt, ex-United States senator, described in previous testimony as the "easy boss." Mr. Platt produced several bundles of musty letters taken from the files kept by his father from 1899 to 1909.

Jacob J. Dickinson, of Washington, another former correspondent of a New York newspaper in Albany, testified regarding a conversation he had with Mr. Barnes, in which the subject of Governor Hughes and race track legislation was freely discussed.

Mr. Dickinson said Barnes told him that he had said to Governor Hughes: "If you are going to discuss this betting legislation from the standpoint of conscience, and not from the standpoint of votes, then we cannot meet on any common ground."

John R. Lawson was one of the prominent leaders in the recent coal miners' strike in Colorado, which was one of the most notable labor conflicts in the history of the United States.

SEE ITALY AT WAR WITHIN FEW DAYS

Tomorrow's Celebration Looked Upon as Significant.

THE KING TO TAKE PART

Advices to Washington Indicate That the Momentous Decision is Near at Hand.

Washington, May 4.—Such advices as have come to the United States government through official and unofficial channels within the past few days indicate that Italy's preparations clearly tend to her participation in the war at an early date.

Aside from her extensive military preparations and orders for war supplies, the expected public appearance of King Victor Emmanuel at the Garibaldi celebration in Rome tomorrow is looked upon there as of much significance, and demonstrations then in favor of war would not be surprising. Heretofore all such outbursts have been given no official sanction, and have at times been repressed, but the present indications are that the point is almost at hand when a final decision on Italy's policy will be reached.

American diplomats in Europe, some of whom are in touch with the Italian situation, believe that the decision is now only a matter of days, and arrangements already are being made to accommodate Italian interests should the emergency arise.

If Italy should enter the war, it is understood she would ask the American embassies in Vienna, Berlin and Constantinople to care for her diplomatic interests. Italy now is the custodian in the Turkish capital of Russian interests, and Ambassador Morgenthau would have another country's subjects and interests to care for besides those of Great Britain and France.

The recent call to Rome of the Italian ambassadors accredited to Great Britain, France, Germany and Austria was generally taken to foreshadow Italy's final decision. In view of the developments of the last few days and information obtained from official sources, diplomats would not be surprised if the Italian ambassadors to Germany and Austria did not return to their posts.

Advise Italians to Leave Austria.

Undine, Italy, May 4.—Italian consuls in Austria-Hungary are recommending that all Italians leave the country as soon as possible. As a result of this warning, Italian merchants, manufacturers and professional men are arriving at Udine from points in Austria.

MRS. CARMAN ON TRIAL

Defendant Assists Counsel in Examination of Talesmen.

Mineola, L. I., May 4.—For the second time in seven months, Mrs. Florence Carman has been placed on trial charged with murder in the first degree for the death of Mrs. Lulu D. Bailey, who was shot last June while in Dr. Edwin Carman's office in Freeport. When court adjourned at noon today seven jurors had been selected.

Mrs. Carman appears to be in perfect health, and during the examination of talesmen her lawyers never accepted or rejected a man without consulting the defendant, who animatedly offered her views upon the acceptability of the talesmen.

At her side sat her husband, Dr. Edwin Carman, of whom the prosecution charges that Mrs. Carman was frequently jealous, an emotion which, either rightly or wrongly, aroused, caused the murder of Mrs. Bailey after the defendant had listened by means of a dictagraph to a conversation between her husband and the murdered woman.

FLAMES THREATEN SOLDIERS

Guns Summon Artillerymen to Rescue When Barn Burns.

Wilmington, Del., May 4.—A fire started in the barn of Shadrach Boyer, near Delaware City, and it was destroyed.

The flames threatened the homes of a number of soldiers, and two guns were fired and the artillerymen summoned to fight the flames.

Bunker Hill mill, a grist mill near Middletown, owned by H. A. Davidson, was also burned. The contents of the mill were also destroyed. The mill was a landmark, and during the Civil War was used as a woolen mill to make blankets for the soldiers.

Coatesville Is Third Class.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 4.—The state has issued a charter as a third class city to Coatesville, which will enter the class on Jan. 1 as the result of an election on the question. The state now has thirty-three third class cities. Lancaster is rated as one, but it is operating under its own charter and not under any third class city act.

Form Clergymen's Corps.

GERMANY MUST EXPLAIN ATTACK

Gulflight Torpedoing to Be Investigated.

Washington, May 4.—Secretary of State Bryan announced that he would instruct Ambassador Gerard to inquire of the German government for the facts in connection with the torpedoing of the American ship Gulflight by a German submarine.

The ambassador has already been instructed to ask the German foreign office for its version of the attack by German albatrosses on the American steamship Cushing last week on her way from Philadelphia to Rotterdam. The report from the American consul at the latter place was forwarded to Ambassador Gerard, with the request that he show it to the German government and ask for whatever facts it might have concerning the incident.

The first official report of the torpedoing of the Gulflight reached the state department in undated dispatches from Consul Stephens at Plymouth, Eng. The dispatches say:

"American tank steamship Gulflight torpedoed off Scilly Islands last inst. Captain died of heart failure; body landed. Two of crew drowned; 34 saved. Vessel afloat."

"Gulflight towed into Crow sound, Scilly, by British patrol. Torpedo struck bluff bow. Vessel down by the head. Freeboard forward about two feet, forehold full. Cargo apparently undamaged. Blowing fast southeasterly."

On the face of the dispatches officials admit that the attack on the ship is a serious matter, but they intend that a very thorough investigation shall be made, and that no hasty action should be taken. In official circles it was thought the inquiry probably would disclose the fact that the attack on the American vessel was an accident and not deliberate.

In that event it was considered as likely that no action would be taken by the American government beyond a demand for damages.

ULTIMATUM, JAPAN'S REPLY

Newspaper Foreshadows Drastic Action to Follow China's Refusal.

The Japanese cabinet was in session for six hours. A telegram was dispatched to M. Hiroko, the Japanese minister to Peking. The Isara News agency said that the emperor might issue an important order in a few days.

COLLISION

Head-On Collision Occurred Near Caledonia. Occupants Escaped Unhurt.

What might have resulted in a fatal accident was strangely averted when Floyd L. Williams, of Reading, was riding a motorcycle and towing another one near Caledonia park.

John Sorg steward at the White Pine sanatorium was coming in an automobile in the other direction. While rounding a curve Sorg and the motorcyclist met. To avoid a crash each turned out to the side of the road but both chose the same side and met in a terrific head-on collision. The motorcycle did not stop until it had climbed upon the hood of the machine. The force of the impact threw the driver off to one side where he escaped without either cuts or bruises. The auto party also escaped injury.

OPERATE QUARRY

Now Working Plants at Bittinger and Spring Grove.

Operations of the stone quarry and the lime kilns, purchased from L. H. Alwine by the Spring Grove Lime and Stone company, recently formed, consisting of the same persons who operate Bittinger's stone and lime plant, at Bittinger, were started this week. Employment is given to fifteen men. Shacks have been erected on the site of the quarry, where the employees will lodge. It is expected that the force of workmen will be increased as rapidly as the quarry and kilns are put into action. The corporation was formed several months ago, shortly after the purchase of the plant, for the purpose of crushing and pulverizing stone and the burning of lime.

TELLS OF RELIEF FOR BELGIANS AND FRIGHTFUL PLIGHT OF SERVA

Rockefeller Foundation Reports on Aid by America to Refugees Who Fled Into Holland.

Also Shows Conditions In Balkans to Combat Which Plague Experts Have Been Sent Out.

FOLLOWING the occupation of Belgium by the German forces, probably 800,000 Belgians sought refuge in Holland. The majority saved nothing beyond the clothing they wore.

The queen of Holland issued a proclamation welcoming the refugees, and systematic efforts to feed and shelter those who could not be taken into private homes were promptly set on foot. A national committee was organized, with headquarters in Amsterdam. But all these efforts soon fell far short of meeting the situation.

The Rockefeller foundation appointed Charles Jenkinson as its special representative in Holland. The following facts were brought out by his investigation:

First.—The Dutch government was prepared to provide shelter and food for the refugees, but did not feel that it could do more.

Second.—Refugees were suffering intensely for lack of warm clothing, a need which the local relief committees were trying vainly to meet.

Third.—Universal illness was undermining the energy and character of the refugees.

Clothing Supplies Pour In.

Early in December large shipments of clothing intended for the Belgians began to arrive at Rotterdam. By agreement with Captain J. F. Lucey of the commission for relief in Belgium, Mr. Jenkinson was appointed to take charge of it.

The clothing had been sent from the United States, Canada and England.

It was of very good quality and much of it absolutely new. Communities had worked together. Each family had given what it could afford. In some instances families had taken this opportunity to clear out their garrets. Others had persuaded clothing dealers to turn over to them stock which, although new, had become unsalable.

Some communities had packed vegetables, salt fish, fruits, canned goods, toys, dolls, silverware, tobacco, etc., with the clothing, and when these cases were opened the contents were found to be an indescribable mass of rotted matter only fit for the rubbish pile.

To classify and distribute this clothing the commission was given free use of a small warehouse. Some thirty women required for sorting were secured from among the refugees. Early in January another warehouse was obtained.

Up to Feb. 22, 12,476 cases had been sorted and sent to various parts of Belgium and Holland. These cases contained 1,386,572 articles of clothing, of which 914,222 went to the destitute in Belgium and 472,350 to Belgian refugees in Holland.

Thousands of Articles.

Among them were 241,034 articles of clothing for men, including 16,749 overcoats, 24,913 coats and jackets and 18,350 trousers. For women there were 324,465 articles, including 63,823 cloaks, 42,110 jackets and coats and 13,977 shoes, and for children 280,775 articles, 250,263 of which were suits. Some 70,000 miscellaneous articles, clothing and household goods, were also sent to Belgium. The articles distributed in Holland included 133,626 articles for men, 143,449 articles for women and 182,541 articles for children.

Most conspicuous among the features of the Belgian exodus was the fact that the refugees had nothing to do. All the women in the concentration camp in the Uranium hotel, in Rotterdam, containing 750 refugees, were called together and asked whether they would help manufacture underwear. Their response was prompt and genuine.

A dressmaker from Brussels, herself a refugee, was engaged as supervisor of the first class, which was under the care of Mme. Reuchlin, Baroness van Eck and Baroness van Gips, Dutch women.

Light, airy rooms were set aside. Fifty women entered. Twelve sewing machines were installed, along with scissors, needles, thread, buttons, cloth, etc. A supply of woolen yarn was provided for women and girls who could not sew, but could knit stockings.

Sewing Classes Formed.

From the first the experiment was successful. A better spirit appeared among the women. Steadily, but with no great rapidity, new warm garments accumulated. The scraps from cutting were saved, and young girls and children pieced quilts from them. This class in one week produced 459 articles of clothing, two-thirds underdraw.

ers and undershirts for men and one-third assorted articles for women and children.

The war relief commission paid the rent of the machines, cost of materials and wages of the forewoman. Later, at the urgent request of the Dutch minister of the interior, a small bonus was given to each sewing woman who worked six hours per day for six days.

The work was rapidly extended to all the eleven provinces of Holland. Thirty-four sewing classes were established within a few months. By April 1 more than 5,000 Belgian women and girls, and some men, were producing clothing needed by themselves and their fellow refugees. Upward of 500 sewing machines were in use.

Lady Johnstone, wife of the British minister, personally visited many of the classes and placed a fund of $2,000 at the disposal of Baron van Tuyll for supplying any little needs of the classes. In addition she ordered 5,000 pairs of scissors from England. The class at The Hague was under the personal supervision of the Princess de Ligne, wife of the secretary of the Belgian legation in Holland.

Men Urged to Go Home.

Plans to develop work for the men in the camps were considered, but it was thought the men should return to their homes, where they could be employed cleaning up the ruins, repairing roads and dikes and cultivating their crops, and in other ways making a start toward rehabilitation. It was believed the harm done to the Belgians in Holland by reason of their idleness outweighed any danger or harm which might come should they return home.

Having got the relief of the Belgians under way, the Rockefeller foundation investigated the needs of non-combatants in Serbia. In their report the commissioners say:

The peasants make their own clothes. The outer garments of most of the men consist of rough homespun, the wool of which is undyed. The national footwear is a sort of half sandal, half moccasin, which was generally made of rawhide until quite recently. It is not a manufactured shoe. Nine-tenths of the undergarments for men and women are home woven.

One now sees plenty of people going about covered with nothing but the raggedest rags. The Serbian reservists are without uniforms and can be distinguished from other peasants only by their weapons or sometimes by a military cap.

If a refugee or soldier who has had neither bed to sleep in nor change of clothes for weeks is brought into a Master Clock Can Operate Many.

Tests made by an English electrician have shown that it is possible for a single master clock to operate 500 other clocks strung along fifty miles of wire.

Servian hospital there will probably be no clean clothes of any kind to put on him.

At present the country is mobilizing every one capable of military service except in Macedonia.

Since the second expulsion of the Austro-Hungarian forces many of the Servians have returned to their destroyed homes and are suffering from want of shelter, clothing and food.

Many Austrians of Serbian blood are reported to have fled into Serbia to escape enforced service in the Austrian army. They are distributed among the communities along its western frontier. The statement was made that 15,000 or 20,000 of these refugees are in destitution.

Much need exists among many thousand Servians, probably 300,000 or more. The plight of those wretched people is aggravated by the prevalence of epidemic disease, which they are helpless to control.

Nish, which has a normal population of about 25,000, now shelters a population estimated at about 80,000. It is difficult to describe the condition of the people. The ravages of starvation and disease were appalling.

There remains in our minds the picture of a baby in one group whose drawn face, the skin stretched sharply over the bones, gave an impression of toothless old age, clutching weakly at the breasts of a mother too weak to nourish or care for it. Other children were whimpering pitifully, too feeble to crawl about. Here a dying woman moaned faintly, and there beside a vacant space a candle burned, indicating that on that spot some one had died a few hours before.

Cholera Now Feared.

Typhus, typhoid and recurrent fever are epidemic in Serbia. Smallpox and scarlet fever are also present in some communities. Cholera is expected with the warm weather.

The Serbian authorities say that the Austrian army brought these diseases. Many of its soldiers died of typhus while with the army of occupation. The Servians captured about 60,000 Austrian prisoners. Detachments of prisoners were sent to all the important cities. In this way, it is said, the seeds of typhus were widely scattered.

Soldiers are constantly being transported by rail. When civilians occupy the same cars later they carry away some of the vermin which disseminate typhus.

Death from the epidemic because of its frequency already has become a commonplace.

Estimates place the total number of typhus cases in Serbia at 25,000 to 30,000.

Normally Serbia has not more than 400 physicians, a very small number for a population of 4,500,000. In the two months of January and February sixty of these physicians died of typhus, and during our stay in Serbia we were told daily of the striking down of others. Medical missions from foreign countries have suffered severely. At the American Red Cross one doctor was dead from the disease when we were in Serbia and several nurses were very low. Two American doctors from Paris contracted typhus and one died.

Trained nurses, as we know them in the United States, are unknown. Recognizing the menace not only to the Serbian people, but the whole world, the Rockefeller foundation took the matter up with the American Red Cross. Inquiry brought a cable from the Serbian government inviting an American sanitary commission.

Dr. Strong Heads Experts.

The American sanitary commission was accordingly constituted and sent out under the leadership of Dr. Richard P. Strong, professor of tropical diseases in Harvard Medical school, and probably the foremost plague expert in the United States.

The chief sanitary inspector is Dr. Thomas W. Jackson of Philadelphia; bacteriologist, Dr. Hans Zinsser, professor of bacteriology, Columbia university; clinical laboratory assistant, Dr. Andrew W. Sellards of Harvard Medical school; clinical assistant, Dr. George C. Shattuck of Harvard Medical school; assistant sanitary inspector, Dr. Francis B. Grinnell of Harvard Medical school. Dr. Nicolle, the French expert on typhus, has been invited to co-operate with the commission.

Charles S. Eby of Washington, lately connected with the United States immigration service, is disbursing officer and secretary for the commission.

On Traveling.

One was telling Socrates that such a one was nothing improved by his travels: "I very well believe it," said he, "for he took himself along with him."—Montaigne.

Thoughts That Help

Be not swift to be afraid;
Many a ghostly thing is laid
In the light from out the shade,
Wait and see.

Do not live your sorrows twice;
Fear is like a touch of ice;
Faith can kill it in a trice,
Wait and see.

Why expect the worst to come?
Pondered cares are troublesome;
Joy makes up a goodly sum,
Wait and see.

Better than your wildest dreams
Is God's light that for you gleams,
When the morning cloudy seems,
Wait and see.

VINCENT ASTOR'S AIRSHIP SAID TO BE "FOOL PROOF."

Hydroaeroplane Has Luxurious Cabin In Which Bride Will Fly.

The $14,000 hydroaeroplane which Vincent Astor is learning to fly at Marblehead, Mass., is said to be "fool proof." It was specially constructed for him and has a comfortable cabin in which he will take his bride on flights, it is said.

By various devices the craft is believed to have been given the highest degree of safety and inherent stability obtainable in air navigation. In addition to this, personal comfort and attractive appearance have been provided for in the construction of the machine.

The main floating section is comprised in the boat hull, which will house not only the pilot and passengers, but fuel and oil supplies. For the first named there are two compartments, one at the bow for the operator and one amidships. The latter is furnished with two seats, the rear of which contains a duplicate set of controls.

The rear compartment is located directly between the two sections of the lower wing surface. The occupants of this compartment will be thoroughly sheltered from wind and spray.

The method of access to the forward part of the machine is a novel feature of it. Two doors at the bow give entrance to this compartment, and thence to the stern. When the doors are closed the occupants are afforded perfect shelter. Both sections have deep upholstered seats and spring cushions.

The motor will develop from 100 to 110 horsepower, and will furnish power to drive the craft at a speed of between sixty-five and seventy miles an hour.

The machine is supplemented with a specially built floating hangar, which can be piloted to any location to please Mr. Astor's fancy and convenience.

GIRLS BAR BOYS WHO SMOKE.

"Fingers That Hold Cigarettes Shant' Hold Ours," Is Pledge.

"Fingers that hold cigarettes shall never hold ours" is the first rule of the Girls' Anti-cigarette club at Lewis, Kan.

The girls take a solemn pledge. It runs:

"We hereby solemnly pledge that we will not associate with any young man addicted to the cigarette habit. We will not walk on the street with him nor recognize him in public."

At first the boys regarded the club as a joke. But it wasn't so funny when after church Sunday nights every blessed girl cut the escorts lined up at the doors and struck out for home alone.

AERO AIDS DOCTOR'S HASTE.

Takes Him to Accident Call at Speed of 110 Miles an Hour.

When he received an emergency call to an accident eleven miles out of Grinnell, Ia., Dr. Pearl E. Somers pressed into service W. C. Robinson, an aviator, who drove him through the air at a speed of 110 miles an hour and landed him at his patient's side in six minutes.

This is the first time a physician has used an aeroplane to answer a call in Iowa.

WAR PROVES WAGE RAISER IN BRITAIN.

War has unexpectedly raised the wages of workers in Britain. Food prices in England are up about 10 per cent. Wages have gone up more than 5 per cent. Beyond that there is much overtime.

Railway men, 75 cents a week.
Longshoremen, from 25 cents to $2 a week.
Palace men, 75 cents a week.
Carpenters, $1 to $1.50 a week.
General laborers, 75 cents to $1.50 a week.

Gas workers, $1 a week.
Bakers, increase of $1.25 a week asked, but employers' offer of 75 cents accepted pending negotiations.

Textile workers, bonus for overtime work in factories doing work on army clothing.

Miners, employers generally offer 10 per cent advance in pay; miners demand 20 per cent.

Postal employees, including telephone and telegraph workers, 10 per cent advance in pay has been demanded.

Boot and shoe workers, 5 to 10 per cent.

Coppersmiths, average wage before war $3, now $3.25 a week.
Clerks, some increase; 180,000 grocers' assistants have asked a readjustment of wages; similar movements pending in other branches.

Engineering and building trade workers, some sections have secured substantial increases.

SYNOPSIS.

Christopher Bellew, a tenderfoot, starts for the Klondike in a gold rush and pluckily works at the back breaking toll of packing freight.

He meets a beautiful girl, Joy Gastell, deserts his own party, and he and Shorty, a new acquaintance, hire out to two wealthy prospectors. Joy has nicknamed him "Smoke."

Smoke and Shorty befriend a man named Breck and nearly perish in attempting to cross Lake Lebarge because of the uselessness of their employers.

Smoke and Shorty take command by force and get through to Dawson City, where they are discharged. On Breck's tip they stampede for Squaw Creek.

They overtake Joy Gastell and her father. To help the Sea Lion crowd Joy treacherously leads them away from Squaw Creek.

Smoke saves the girl's feet from freezing. He and Shorty by mistake jump a miner's claim and lose it. Then Smoke finds Surprise lake, the bottom of which is covered with gold.

Smoke is shot at, witnesses the murder of a miner by the unknown marksmen and is arrested for murder himself.

Breck shows a Surprise lake ruckee, the impromptu court is stampeded, and Smoke's life is saved. Smoke wins money at roulette.

He continues to win, and the gamblers buy him off. His system was based on the discovery that the roulette wheel was warped.

Prompted by Joy Gastell, Smoke enters a race for a million dollar claim against some of the best dog mushers.

At a critical moment Joy supplies Smoke with a fresh dog team, and he runs a dead heat with Big Olaf for the claim.

Smoke goes to Surprise lake. He falls into a crevasse in a glacier, and a miner, Carson, makes heroic efforts to rescue him.

Smoke cuts a rope to save Carson, falls himself and is caught in a pocket below, from which he is rescued by Carson and Joy.

Smoke and Shorty find a tribe of starving Indians, and Smoke goes to Mucluc to secure food and help.

Smoke forces Cultus George, an Indian, to assist by strapping him up with a rope. Smoke and Shorty find several dead men in the snow.

They discover Laura Sibley's party dying of scurvy and start heroic nursing measures. One man, Wentworth, is mysteriously free from the trouble.

They discover Wentworth's secret hoard of potatoes and save many lives. Lucille Arral wants Smoke to corner the egg market and discipline her lover, Wild Water.

Wild Water wants eggs for Miss Arral. He agrees to pay $10 per egg if two dozen sold him win her smile.

CHAPTER XXI.

Captured by Indians.

SMOKE, sitting on the edge of a sleeping robe, examined the feet of a dog he had rolled, snarling, on its back in the snow.

"We've got to rest over tomorrow and make moccasins," he roushaused. "That little crust is playing the devil with their feet."

"We oughta keep goin' somehow," Shorty objected. "We ain't got grub enough to turn back with, and we gotta strike that run of caribou or them white Indians almighty soon or we'll be eatin' the dogs, so feet an' all. Now, who even seen them white Indians anyway? Notthin' but hearsay. An' how can a Indian be white? Smoke, we just gotta travel tomorrow."

"They'll travel all the better with a day's rest for their feet and moccasins all around," Smoke counseled. "If you get a chance at any low divide take a peep over the country beyond. We're likely to strike open rolling country any time now. That's what La Perle told us to look for."

"Huh! By his own story it was ten years ago that La Perle come through this section, an' he was that loco from hunger he couldn't know what he did see. An' he said himself he never seen any white Indians. That was Anton's yarn. An' Anton kicked the bucket two years before you an' me come to Alaska. But I'll take a look tomorrow. An' maybe I might pick up a moose."

Smoke spent the morning in camp sewing dog moccasins. At noon he cooked a meal for two and began to look for Shorty's return. An hour later he was strapped on his snowshoes and went out on his partner's trail.

The way led up the bed of the stream through a narrow gorge that widened suddenly into a moose pasture. But no moose had been there since the first snow of the preceding fall. The tracks of Shorty's snowshoes crossed the pasture and went up the easy slope of a low divide. At the crest Smoke halted. The tracks continued down the other slope. The first spruce trees, in the creek bed, were a mile away, and it was evident that Shorty had passed through them and gone on. Smoke looked at his watch, remembered the oncoming darkness, the dogs and the camp and reluctantly decided against going farther.

Until midnight Smoke maintained a huge fire for the guidance of Shorty. And in the morning, waiting with camp broken and dogs harnessed for the first break of light, Smoke took up the pursuit. In the narrow pass of the canyon his lead dog pricked up his ears and whined. Then Smoke came upon the Indians, six of them, coming toward him. They were traveling light, without dogs, and on each man's back time. They're another white man here. Got caught six years ago. Danny McCann is what he goes by. He's settled down with a squaw. Got two kids already, but he'll skin out if ever the chance opens up."

Apparently this was Smoke's appointed domicile, for his captors left him and his dogs and went on deeper into the big camp. While he devoured strips of hot meat Shorty talked.

"This is a sure peach of a pickle, Smoke. An' we got to go some to get out. These is the real, blowed in the glass wild Indians. They ain't white, but their chief is. He talks like a mouthful of hot mush, an' if he ain't full blooded Scotch they ain't no such thing as Scotch in the world. He's the hi-yun, skookum, top chief of the whole chowdoodle. What he says goes. You want to get that from the start off."

"Danny McCann's been tryin' to get away from him for six years. Danny's all right, but he ain't got go in him. He knows a way out—learned it on huntin' trips—to the west of the way you an' me came. He ain't had the nerve to tackle it by his lonesome. But we can pull it off, the three of us. Whiskers is the real goods, but he's mostly loco, just the same."

"Who's Whiskers?" Smoke queried.

"Why, he's the top geezer. He's the Scotcher. He's gettin' old, an' he's sure asleep now, but he'll see you tomorrow an' show you clear as print what a meany shrimp you are on his stompin' grounds. These grounds belong to him. You got to get that into your noodle. They ain't never been explored no nothin', an' they're his, an' he won't let you forget it. He's got about 20,000 square miles of huntin' country here all his own. He's the white Indian, him an' the skit."

"Huh! Don't look at me that way. Wait till you see her. Some looker."

Smoke could only mumble phrases that were awkwardly reminiscent of his best society manner.

"I am glad to see you," she went on slowly and gropingly, her face a ripple of smiles. "My English you will please excuse. It is not good. I am English like you," she gravely assessed him.

"My father he is Scotch. My mother she is dead. She was French and English and a little Indian too. Her father was a great man in the Hudson Bay company. B-r-r-r! It is cold. Let us go to the fire and talk. My name is Labiskwee. What is your name?"

And so Smoke came to know Labiskwee, the daughter of Snass, whom Snass called Margaret.

"Snass is not my father's name," she informed Smoke. "Snass is only an Indian name."

Much Smoke learned that day and in the days that followed. These were real wild Indians, the ones Anton had encountered and escaped from long years before. But strive as he would Smoke could get no clew to Snass, history in the days before he came to live in the northern wilds. Educated he was, yet in all the intervening years what had happened in the world he knew not. Nor did he show desire to know.

Nor could Labiskwee help Smoke with earlier information. She had been born on the hunting grounds. Her mother had lived for six years after. Her mother had been very beautiful—the only white woman Labiskwee had ever seen. She said this wistfully, and wistfully in a thousand ways she showed that she knew of the great old world upon which her father had closed the door. But this knowledge was secret. She had early learned that mention of it threw her father into a rage.

Anton had told a squaw of her mother and that her mother had been a daughter of a high official in the Hudson Bay company. Later the squaw had told Labiskwee. But her mother's name she had never learned.

AMOLOX CURES SKIN DISEASES

Stops itching instantly, drives out all skin eruptions. Do not suffer unbearable torture of eczema and other skin diseases. Amolox is the prescription of a well-known doctor who has used it with remarkable success in his private practice and now for the first time is offered to all sufferers from eczema, tetter, psoriasis, ringworm, acne, pimples and all skin eruptions. The People's Drug Store sells Amolox on a guarantee to give satisfaction. Just wash the skin with a few drops of this remarkable clean prescription; all itch and burning stops instantly. It softens and soothes the skin, so you can rest and sleep. Trial size, 50 cents.

In chronic cases best results are obtained when both liquid and ointment are used.

Later on in the morning Smoke went for a stroll through the camp, busy with its primitive pursuits. A big body of hunters had just returned, and the men were scattering to their various fires. Women and children were departing with dogs harnessed to empty toboggan sleds, and women and children and dogs were hauling sleds heavy with meat fresh from the killing and already frozen. Furs and soft tanned leather clad all alike. Boys passed with bows in their hands and quivers of bone barbed arrows, and many a skinning knife of bone or stone. Smoke saw in belts or neck hanging sheaths.

Segregated in the heart of the camp, Smoke came upon what was evidently Snass' fire. Though temporary in every detail, it was solidly constructed and was on a large scale. A great heap of bales of skins and outfit was piled on a scaffold out of reach of the dogs. A large canvas fly, almost half tent, sheltered the sleeping and living quarters.

To one side was a silk tent—the sort favored by explorers and wealthy big game hunters. Smoke had never seen such a tent and stepped closer. As he stood looking the flaps parted and a young woman came out. So quickly did she move, so abruptly did she appear, that the effect on Smoke was as that of an apparition. He seemed to have the same effect on her, and for a long moment they gazed at each other.

She was dressed entirely in skins, but such skins and such magnificently beautiful fur work Smoke had never dreamed of. Her parka, the hood thrown back, was of some strange fur of palest silver. The mukluks, with walrus hide soles, were composed of the silver padded feet of many lynxes. The long gauntleted mittens, the tassels at the knees, all the varied furs of the costume, were pale silver that shimmered in the frosty light, and out of this shimmering silver, poised on a slender, delicate neck, lifted her head, the rosy face blond as the eyes were blue, the ears like two pink shells, the light chestnut hair touched with frost dust and coronating frost glints.

All this and more, as in a dream, Smoke saw; then, recollecting himself, his hand fumbled for his cap. At the same moment the wonder stare in the girl's eyes passed into a smile, and she slipped a mitten and extended her hand.

"How do you do?" she murmured gravely, with a queer, delightful accent, her voice as silvery as the furs she wore.

Smoke could only mumble phrases that were awkwardly reminiscent of his best society manner.

"I am glad to see you," she went on slowly and gropingly, her face a ripple of smiles. "My English you will please excuse. It is not good. I am English like you," she gravely assessed him.

HOW SAVINGS GROW.

Ben Franklin's Proof That "Money is of a Prolific Nature."

After publishing his "Poor Richard's Almanac" for twenty-five years and giving thirty-two years more as a thrifty teacher of his country Benjamin Franklin put into his will a provision to demonstrate the power of accumulated savings.

To the cities of Boston and Philadelphia he left $5,000 each. The money was to be put out at interest and allowed to accumulate for a hundred years. At the end of that time, he figured, each city ought to have $650,000. He directed that at the end of the hundred years $500,000 should be invested by each city "in public works which may be of most general utility to the inhabitants." The rest should then be put at interest for another hundred years, when the accumulation should be divided, one-quarter to the city and three-quarters to the state.

When the first hundred years were past Boston found that she had $653,923 to her credit from the Franklin fund. Taking $500,000, Boston established a training school for mechanics. The remaining $153,923 was put out at interest again.

Philadelphia's experience with the original fund of $5,000 was about the same as Boston's.

Now, Franklin figured that at the end of the second hundred years, when the fund is to be distributed, each fund ought to amount to about $200,000,000. But Boston's fund at the end of the first hundred years exceeded Franklin's estimate by $13,923. So here's a problem:

If Boston handles the fund as successfully in the second hundred years as she did in the first how much in excess of $200,000,000 will it be?

Franklin's demonstration was impressive; $5,000 will go into $653,923 how many times? Nearly 133 times. Wasn't he amply justified when he said, "Money is of a prolific nature?"

What sort of a demonstration can you make?—John Oskison in Chicago News.

Fried Green Peppers.

Wash sweet green peppers and cut in halves. Remove the seeds and fry the peppers in hot olive oil until thoroughly cooked. Have ready a cream gravy or white sauce and pour it over the peppers after they have been drained of grease on blotting or brown paper and seasoned with salt and pepper.

Clam Batter Balls.

One cupful of mashed potato, one pint of clams, cut fine; one egg, one-half cupful of clam juice, one-half cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, flour to make rather stiff batter. Drop in spoonfuls in deep, hot fat and fry brown.

Goethe and the Cherry Tree.

When I was a boy, I planted a cherry tree, and watched its growth with delight. Spring frosts killed the blossoms, and I had to wait another year before the cherries were ripe—then the birds ate them; another year the caterpillars; then a greedy neighbor; then the blight. Nevertheless, when I have a garden again, I shall plant a cherry tree!—Goethe.

CATARRH CAUSED BY A GERM

How To Destroy the Germ and End Disease.

To cure catarrh so it won't come back you must, according to a noted authority, drive from your body the million of germs that are flourishing in the inner recesses of your nose and throat and are causing the disease.

There is a preparation which does this called HYO-ME (pronounced High-o-me.) HYO-ME is a germ killing vaporized air formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. You breathe HYO-ME through the mouth and nose by means of a little hard rubber inhaler which druggists furnish with it. This medicated germicidal air penetrates into every fold and crevice of the mucous membrane of your nose and throat, kills the catarrh germs that lodge there, soothes, reduces and heals the swollen, inflamed membrane, stops the discharge and opens up the clogged nose and air passages in a truly wonderful way. People's Drug Store and many other leading druggists in GETTYSBURG and vicinity sell HYO-ME with the positive guarantee that it must cure catarrh or that the money paid for it will be refunded.

TEUTONS CRUSH RUSSIAN FRONT

Austro-Germans Pierce Foe's Line at Every Point.

THEIR RETREAT MENACED

The Czar's Troops are Reported in Flight From Poland Border to Hungarian Frontier.

Berlin, May 4.—An important Austrian victory in the eastern campaign is announced in the communication issued from German army headquarters.

The statement is made that the Austrians have pierced and broken the entire Russian front in West Galicia.

The Russians are officially reported to be in retreat, leaving behind enormous quantities of booty, which have fallen into the hands of the Germans and Austrians.

The official statement follows: "In the southeastern theater, in the presence of the Austrian commander-in-chief, Field Marshal Archduke Frederick, and under the leadership of General von Mackensen, the Austrian troops, after bitter fighting everywhere, pierced and crushed the entire Russian front in West Galicia, from the neighborhood of the Hungarian frontier to the junction of the Danube river with the Vistula.

"Such of the enemy as succeeded in escaping are in hasty retreat toward the east, closely pursued by the allied troops. The trophies of the victory cannot yet even be approximately estimated.

"In the northeastern theater, during further pursuit of the Russians, who were fleeing in the direction of Riga, we captured four cannon and four machine guns. We also took 1700 prisoners south of Mitau, so that the total number of prisoners was increased to 3200.

"The Russian attacks southeast of Kalwarya failed with heavy losses to the enemy. The Russians left 330 prisoners in our hands.

"Northeast of Skirnewice the Russians also suffered a heavy defeat, in which they left a great number in killed and men taken prisoners."

Foe's Advance Unchecked, Says Russia. Petrograd, May 4.—The spectacular advances of German forces along a hundred mile front extending from the Baltic sea near Libau in a southeasterly direction to the northern tributaries of the river Niemen continues unchecked.

It has not disturbed Russian activity in the region south of the Niemen, where consistent successes are being won by the troops of Emperor Nicholas.

The German movement in the Baltic provinces, which is designed to sever communications with Libau and thus cripple the Russian right wing, is not regarded seriously by the Russians, inasmuch as the flooding of the Niemen entirely separates the Germans from their base and from the other German armies. The two fields of operations, one on each side of the river, are therefore as isolated from each other as though they were 1000 miles apart, although actually they are adjacent.

Russian observers characterize the German advance north of the Niemen as a "comic opera affair," designed to induce the Russians to transfer hurriedly troops to that region.

BELIEVE EAGLE LAMB THIEF

Giant Bird Shot Near Wilkes-Barre Had Tell-Tale Wool in Talons. Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 4.—A mountain eagle measuring seven and a half feet from tip to tip of its wings and weighing thirty-five pounds, was shot at Hay's Corners, about twelve miles from here, by Ollie Hay.

When brought down it had lamb's wool in its talons, and the raisers in the section are now looking for its nest to verify the theory that it carried off several of the small lambs of their flocks.

The farmers say that the eagle was powerful enough to carry off a three-year-old child. It is the first eagle ever shot in the region, according to farmers who have lived in the vicinity all their lives.

ALLIES LAND SECOND FORCE ON ASIA SIDE

New Dardanelles Contingent South of Kum Kale.

London, May 4.—While, according to a wireless dispatch from Athens, the French troops which landed on the Asia Minor side of the Dardanelles at Kum Kale have been forced to retire after a stubborn battle lasting two days, the allies are reported to have effected a successful landing at another point in a dispatch from the Daily Mail's correspondent at the Greek capital, who telegraphs:

"The landing of the allied troops on the Asiatic coast has been accomplished successfully at Kerikli. This force is advancing rapidly, according to latest information."

(In mentioning Kerikli the correspondent probably refers to Gheyikli, fourteen miles south of Kum Kale.)

The retirement of the French from Kum Kale is not regarded as a serious check to the allies. The view is expressed that the French landed there only to facilitate the British operations on the other side.

A casualty list issued by the British war department shows that during the landing of British troops in the operations against the Dardanelles between April 25 and 30 twenty-six men of the British fleet were killed and fifty-three were wounded.

Wanted, a Hangman. Executioner of Wilmington Murderer Will Be Unknown.

Wilmington, Del., May 4. — It is probable that the man who hanks Peter Melba for the murder of Policeman Francis X. Tierney will never be known.

The execution will take place on May 14, and under the law the trustees of the workhouse select the man to execute the sentence of the court.

Chief Warden Crawford, on whom the duty would likely fall, is ill, and will be unable to be present at the execution. Deputy Warden Wingate will not be asked, because he is opposed to capital punishment.

Melba still maintains silence and does not appear to be worried over the fact that his end is so near.

THE TROUBLES OF BELINDA

Judging by Appearances Led to False Conclusions.

Frank and I concluded to spend our honeymoon in Washington. We wanted to inspect that beautiful city and see and hear the prominent men assembled there.

We gave up the first few days to sightseeing, then spent our time in the senate chamber and house of representatives. I was much impressed with the dignity of the senators, and some of the representatives seemed to me to be very bright men.

The last day we were in Washington found me quite fatigued. I had been at the hall of representatives all day, where a discussion on the tariff was going on, and I was converted from one side to the other a dozen times.

About 4 o'clock in the afternoon we went to the hotel, and Frank left me that I might take a rest before dinner. In the evening we were to visit some place of amusement. Frank had scarcely gone out before I heard a step in the hall and a key turned in the lock next door.

Some one entered the room, and as there was a door between the two rooms I could hear very plainly. A man's voice said:

"Belinda, get up. Do you propose to keep your bed all day? Are you not aware that in political life a wife has a part to play as well as the husband? Here I am pestered all day by constituents, every one of whom has an 'ax' to grind, while you are dreaming the happy hours away. Get up, I say, and sew on this button."

Then a woman's voice:

"Jethro, you're a brute. Didn't I save the life of one of you when you were running for congress, cookin' for the whole crowd? Wasn't you always bringin' folks home to dinner, and didn't I have not only to cook for 'em, but play sweet on 'em? And what do I get for it? Shut up here in this lonesome hotel while you strut about in the lobby buttonholed by female constituents, who play sweet on you to get you to introduce bills for their relief. And you fool enough to think they love you."

There was no reply to this. The man had evidently been convinced of his injustice and kept quiet.

Oh, dear! Are Frank and I ever coming to speak to one another like this? And what a fraud political life must be, after all.

"Belinda!"

It was the man next door again. I wished they would go out. I had no hope of getting a nap and would be tired in the evening.

"Shut up!"

"Come out of that closet."

"I'm dressin'."

"Dressin', ole gail! Do you mean you've got to go into a closet to dress when there's no one present but your lawful lord and master?"

The woman was evidently in the closet, for her voice was muffled, but I could hear it distinctly.

"You my lord and master! You'd make a beautiful lord, and as for a master, you're a slave—a slave to your constituents. You wouldn't dare complain to one of 'em if he rapped you over the head."

"I'll rap you over the head, you ole Jezebel, if you say that again."

"You're no sort of a lord, and you're a slave—worse'n a slave. You're a—"

I heard one blow and a cry and covered my head with the bedclothes. I lay thinking what a horrid couple they were and what low people represent us in congress. When I took the clothes away from my ears the man was humming a tune. Every now and again there came a sob from the woman, but he paid no attention to it, and she seemed to be crying herself asleep.

I could not realize that the gentleman I had seen during the day at the capitol sitting in their seats and speaking many of them so learnedly, numbered among them even one who was a wife beater. But here was perfect evidence of it.

The brute went out presently and when he did so locked his wife in the room. I listened, but heard nothing. She was doubtless asleep and had forgotten his horrid treatment. Frank came in, and when I told him about it he was not surprised. But Frank is always talking about the low type of people engaged in politics. I dressed for dinner, and we went downstairs.

In the evening we strolled out to find some place of amusement. We passed a variety hall, and, since as a girl I had been denied such places, I begged Frank to take me in. We listened to women sing songs and men sing songs and people dance and saw trained animals. Then a man came out and threw down some little dummy figures. And what do you suppose was the first word he said?

"Belinda, get up."

Good gracious! He was the brute I had been listening to during the afternoon. He repeated the conversation I had overheard, which he had been doubtless rehearsing, and ended by beating one of the dummies, his wife who sobbed as naturally as she did during the afternoon.

At the first word Frank and I looked at each other. Then Frank burst out laughing. And during the rest of the ventriloquist's performance we hid our faces in our handkerchiefs to conceal from the audience a mirth it could not understand.

"It doesn't do," said Frank as we walked back to the hotel, "to judge by appearances. Perhaps many of our legislators are good men after all."

OUR GREAT CANAL

How Vessels Cross From Ocean to Ocean at Panama.

Electric Locomotives of Unique Design, With a Cog Rail System, Are Used For Towing Purposes—Safe-guarding the Lock Walls and Gates.

Forty electric locomotives of unique design are used to tow shipping through the huge locks of the Panama canal. When the canal was being planned it was apparent that the various winch and capstan systems in vogue for towing ships through existing canals and locks would not do at all for Panama. After a thorough study of the entire problem of maneuvering ships through the locks at Panama it was evident that they could not safely proceed through the locks under their own power and that a substitute for the ship's power should embrace the following requirements:

Ability to place the ship in proper relation to the lock.

Capability for keeping the ship in its course.

Accelerating and retarding the ship without rupturing the lines.

The lines when once attached should be used without change for lockage in flight.

In passing through the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific a vessel enters the approach channel in Limon bay, which extends to Gatun, a distance of about seven miles. At Gatun it enters a series of three locks in flight and is raised eighty-five feet to the level of Gatun lake. It then steams at full speed through the greater part of the channel in this lake for a distance of twenty-four miles to Bas Obispo, where it enters the Culebra cut. It passes through this cut, which has a length of nine miles, and reaches Pedro Miguel, where it enters a lock and is lowered thirty feet. Then it passes through Miraflores lake for a distance of one and one-half miles until it reaches Miraflores, where it is lowered fifty-five feet through two locks to the sea level, after which it passes out into the Pacific through an eight and one-half mile channel.

The main features of all the lock sites are identical, and the following brief description of the Gatun locks, with special reference to the arrangement of the towing tracks, ship channels, inclines and approaches, gives a clearer conception of the towing scheme in general.

There are two channels at Gatun, one for traffic in each direction. The channels are separated by a center wall, the total length of which is 6,350 feet. There are two systems of tracks, one for towing and the other for the return of the electric locomotives when returning idle. This, however, refers only to the outer walls. For the center wall there is only one return track in common for both the towing tracks.

The towing tracks are naturally placed next to the channel side, and the system of towing utilizes normally not less than four locomotives running along the lock walls. Two of them are opposite each other in advance of the vessel, and two run opposite each other following the vessel. The number of locomotives is, however, increased when the tonnage of the ship demands it.

Cables extend from the forward locomotives and connect with the port and starboard sides, respectively, of the vessel near the bow, and other cables connect the rear locomotives with the port and starboard quarters of the vessel. The lengths of the various cables are adjusted by a special winding drum on the locomotive to place the vessel substantially in midchannel. When the leading locomotives are started they tow the vessel, while the trailing locomotives follow and keep the cables taut. By changing the lengths of the rear cables the vessel can be guided, and to stop the vessel all the locomotives are slowed down and stopped.

thus bringing the rear locomotives in action to retard the ship. Therefore, the vessel is always under complete control quite independent of its own power, which is not used, and the danger of injury to the lock walls and gates is consequently very greatly lessened.

These towing tracks have a specially designed rack rail extending the entire length of the track between the rails. It is through this rack that the locomotive exerts the traction necessary for propelling large ships and climbing the steep inclines. When the locomotive reaches one of the inclines between the locks, the grade of which may be as much as 44 per cent, or when it is towing a ship, the cog rail system is utilized to enable the locomotive to climb the grade and in the other case to exert traction necessary for pulling the ships. The cog or rack rail is laid between the track rails and the locomotive is provided with a cog wheel or rack pinion to engage the rail.—Electric News.

Turn About.

"You'd better hide somewhere," said the rooster to the hen, "the boss has an ax in his hand and he's laying for you."

"Well," said the hen resignedly, "I presume I have no right to complain. I've been laying for him for a good many years."—Boston Transcript.

THE LAWYER'S FABLE.

It Took the Sting Out of His Opponent's Florid Oratory.

A barrister who was possessed of an abnormally loud voice was making an eloquent address to a jury. His case was fairly strong; he was much in earnest, and his trumpet tones made the rafters ring. In a hurricane of sound he closed his argument and sat down. The jury looked serious and thoughtful and were evidently much impressed. The opposing barrister had a face like a hatchet and a thin low voice—the exact opposite of his learned friend. When it became his turn to address the jury he began:

"As I listened to the rather thunderous appeals of my learned friend I recalled a fable which I heard in my youth. A lion and an ass entered into a compact to slay the beasts of the field and share the spoil. They divided the work; the ass was to go into the thicket and bray and frighten the animals out, while the lion was to lie in wait and kill the fugitives as fast as they appeared. Well, the ass sought the darkest part of the jungle and, lifting up his awful voice, brayed and brayed and brayed. There never was heard such a fearful din.

"The ass was quite intoxicated with his own uproar and thought he'd return to see what the lion thought of it. With a light heart he went back and found the lion looking doubtfully about him, pale in the face and trembling in every limb. 'What do you think of that braying?' said the exultant ass. 'Don't you think I scared them?' 'Scared them?' repeated the lion in an agitated tone. 'Why, you'd scared me if I didn't know you were a jack ass.'—London Graphic.

The Kings of Denmark.

The dust of the Danish kings is kept in a great cathedral at Roskilde, an old town twenty miles from Copenhagen. Every year the entire royal family always pay a visit to Roskilde in obedience to an ancient custom. On one of the pillars are marks showing the height of Peter the Great, Nicholas, the Iron Czar, Alexander III, of Russia, the king of England and many other kings. The cathedral was built in the eleventh century. It has two mighty towers, which can be seen at a long distance. The oldest grave is that of King Harold I, who died in 987.

Feeding by Law.

A law to punish by imprisonment persons found guilty of overfeeding was actually promulgated in France during the reign of Charles IX, when the cost of living reached an unconscionable height. It was then ordained that no person should eat more than three courses at a meal, the amount to be served at each course being also prescribed. Heavy fines were imposed for any breach of this law.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Coffee or Cocoa.

TRIM eight veal chops, pared most carefully to keep them as wide as possible; season and fry with some melted fat pork, turning them while cooking to let them remain quite rare.

Remove the chops, leaving the pork in the pan, and to it add finely chopped onions, mushrooms, green peppers and tomatoes. After these have been rendered of their moisture take them out, and mix with some chopped parsley and cooked, lean, finely shredded Virginia ham, together with two spoonfuls of baking forcement. Divide this preparation into as many parts as there are chops and cover each one with a layer of fat.

Cut some sheets of strong paper into heart shapes, oil over on one-half the right side, put a slice of Virginia ham and a little sauce with a chop on top, then a little more of the sauce and an other slice of Virginia ham and fold the paper over. Brown in a buttered dish and serve.

Trout, Roquefort Style.

Prepare some very thin pancakes, cover each one with a layer of salmon forcement into which raw, fine herbs have been mingled; place another thin pancake on top, then pare them into half heart shapes. Bone some trout, leaving on the head; remove the eyes and replace them by a small bit of forcement; add a few truffles, roll them up with fillets inside and fill the empty space in the center of each side with some of the same forcement, then set on top a fluted mushroom head.

TRIES TO BLOW UP DOG, BUT—

Dynamite Man Ties to Animal's Tail Only Wrecks Home.

Anxious to rid himself of a dog that had become a nuisance, George Verbos of Indiana, Pa., thought it would be easy to rope him to a tree and then tie a stick of dynamite to his tail.

The poor brute would wag his tail, the dynamite would sway the tree and then— But as Verbos darted behind a tree a safe distance away he saw the rope part that held the dog.

Verbos sprinted madly for his house. As he slammed the door behind him the dog leaped on to the stoop.

There was an awful explosion. The porch and part of the house were wrecked. Verbos? He wasn't hurt, nor was the dog.

PROCK FOR A LIMITED INCOME.

at the waist-line, and the overblouse is an adjustable affair.

It is true that women's ideas of a limited income vary greatly, but everyone will agree that $3.50 is about as reasonable a sum as anyone would expect to expend on a frock of dressy appearance. The model shown here may be carried out in floral printed voile at 25 cents a yard. For medium size 5½ yards are required, making the material cost $1.38. Three-quarters yard of 36-inch satin at $1.50 a yard would add $1.13 to the bill, leaving 99 cents for the ¾ yard of lace required for the yoke and ¾ yard of 2-inch belting. If one is willing to spend 75 cents extra ½ yard of white silk or satin may be added for the vest and collar, but this is purely a matter of taste.

In cutting out the voile only the back of the waist, the collar and the back of the underbody are laid on a lengthwise fold of the material. If a round outline is preferred for the neck it is an easy matter to cut out the neck edge of the shield and single small "o" perforations. The double "oo" perforations must be followed in case the square neck is desired, however. The back and front gores and the pieces for both of these are laid on a lengthwise thread of the voile, as are also the sleeve, the overblouse front and the underbody front.

The overblouse is adjustable and extends below the waist-line, giving a very graceful effect to the model.

Among the less expensive voiles are several very good striped patterns with inch-wide stripes of colors alternating with white. These wide stripes are more fashionable than the narrow, candy-stripe patterns, except for blouses.

Figured silks are excellent for spring and early summer wear, and they have been utilized to excellent advantage in the inexpensive evening and afternoon gowns.

Many of the new full skirts fall more softly and are found more becoming effect. The four-piece skirt is gathered without any petticoat.

COMMITTEE

Colonel Bunker

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"I was just thinking, huh," said Colonel Bunker as he sat looking out of the window—"I was just thinking of an incident in my early career as a duelist. In fact, huh, when this thing came about I had not yet drawn my rapier on the field of honor. In the southern town where I first hung out my shingle as a lawyer, were a dozen gay bucks of young men, and I was one of them.

"We were sports, huh. We rode, we gambled, and we swaggered. We talked about our honor, and we took no advice from our elders.

"It was a wonder we kept clear of the duello among our own selves, for we were hotheads. But destiny had something laid up for us, and at the proper time we learned what it was. When a dapper little man dropped into the town one day and gave his name as Professor Mayne and explained that he was something of a naturalist we had no idea that his coat covered destiny.

"It was about a week after the professor's arrival, and none of us young blades had made his acquaintance yet when six of us sat on the tavern veranda of a summer's evening arranging a fox hunt, when the stranger appeared among us, and, looking directly at me, he asked:

"May I have the honor of asking your name?"

"I gave it as Bunker, of course.

"Bunker? Bunker?" he repeated.

"Did you evah spell it with an H?"

"Suh! Suh! What do you mean?"

"Was the name originally Junker?"

"Egad, huh, the man was deliberately insulting me!"

"I always thought I carried things off very well for a first time. I raised my hat, handed him my card and turned away. He received it with a bow and also turned.

"There you were, huh—there you were! A duel for sunrise was arranged for within an hour, and I was a hero.

"Could a professor of natural history handle a rapier like a young buck who was always at it?"

"No, of course not, and I should play with him. Should I kill or only wound him? That question could wait and he settled after the blades had crossed. The most I had to fear, as my friends told me and as I firmly believed, myself, was that the professor would either send an abject apology or sneak away during the night. He did neither, however.

"We talked the matter over, and all the bucks thought I ought to run the professor through the heart, and thus at once establish my reputation, but I decided that a wound that would lay him up about six weeks would do.

"It was only when the word had been given and our blades had crossed that I found out I had caught a tartar. Why, huh, the professor made me look like 15 cents! He disarmed me twice in ten minutes. He could have killed me during the next five, but he stayed his hand.

"At length, after humiliating me for the best part of half an hour, he picked me in the shoulder and I was out of it. I wept bitter tears as the surgeon dressed my wound. The young bucks didn't know what to make of it, but agreed that they must find excuse to challenge the professor until some one had landed him.

"Egad, huh, they didn't have to go hunting far for excuses. He brought them along and laid them at the feet of those who waited. He stopped Dick Bascomb on the street and politely said to him:

"Suh, nature has made a mistake in your case.

"What do you mean, huh?" asked Dick.

"That your nose is screwed on crooked."

"Suh, you must answer for this insult!"

"Yours to command."

"A second duel, you see, huh, and with the same weapons. I wasn't there to see, but they told me that he made a bigger monkey of Dick Bascomb than he did of me. When he had made a show of him long enough he gave him the point in the same shoulder he had me and walked away whistling.

"We had a sensation in that town now and for fifty miles beyond it. The professor had made two victims and was liable to make others, but there wasn't much feeling against him nor much sympathy for those who had felt his steel.

"Joe Beaumont was to be his third. It was rapier again. I rode to the grounds to see the duel. Joe went at it from the first like a butcher with a long knife and was disarmed every other minute. He got so mad that he cried like a boy.

"It was the same old story—wounded in the same shoulder.

"Three smart bucks. Three duels.

"Three arms in three slings.

"Three of us trying to explain why it wasn't the other fellow who was pinked.

"It was humiliating, huh, and yet it was the proper remedy. It broke up the cabal and settled us down to take a more serious view of life. As to the professor, he wasn't a naturalist at all, but a famous fencer, and I believe he was hired by those who wished us well to come there and administer the remedies our systems seemed to require.

"That's all, huh, and it's a fine day, huh, and it's—"

But the waiter was already bringing it.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Lee Magee, Manager of the Brooklyn Federals.

Lee Magee, manager of the Brooklyn Federal league club, played last season with the St. Louis Nationals. Last winter he jumped to the Feds, and Owner Ward put him in charge of the team. Magee is the youngest manager in any of the big leagues. His real name is Leo Hoernschmeyer, and a few years ago he was assistant ground keeper at the Cincinnati ball park. Practicing with the players every morning, he developed into a very clever player, and soon he was in the National league. Magee's position is second base. Lee is a rather hot headed youngster, and in the first championship game at Brooklyn he was put out of the game and fined $50.

Lightweights a Poor Lot.

"The poorest lot of lightweights in the history of the ring grace it now," says Frank Erne, former lightweight champion. "I don't like Welsh at all. I never saw Nelson, but I'm sure that Volgaist could have whipped him at any stage of his career. I didn't go to see Shugrue or White because they are so poor that it would be wasting an evening. I think Elbows McFadden, Dal Hawkins, Lavigne or Spike Sullivan could have cleaned them all up one by one.

"Joe Gans was a master. He could find you into any position he pleased, leaving you easy prey to a solid punch, hard because it was so unexpected. He was the master blitzer. You perhaps have seen an impromptu battle in a cafe. A man will be hit, sending him across the room. That man wasn't hit; he was pushed. Another man will swing and the other fellow will go flying sideways to the wall. Not a punch. He was pulled around. When Gans hit you you didn't move out of your tracks. You just crumpled dead to the floor."—New York Sun.

Griff Will Develop Youngsters.

That the days of buying ball players at big figures are almost at an end is generally conceded. Manager Griffith of the Washington Americans already has declared himself on that proposition. He says his players hereafter will come from the lots and remote leagues and he will develop them himself. No longer will he recommend the club to dig down in its jeans for the purpose of spending its money for talent only a small percentage of which ever makes good.

The satisfactory proposition about developing players is that they are usually very young when they reach the stage when they can be used regularly and consequently last for years, not necessitating the output of additional money from time to time.

THE LOST DAY

"Friends we have lost a day."

Such was the comment of one of the constructive kings of France when his councillor's reports showed lack of accomplishment.

The merchant who fails to get his message before the buyers of this city, through the advertising columns of this newspaper, can re-echo the sentiment.

Each day there is no advertising for you is a day that represents a loss of possible business.

Why lose any day?
